Equations of a tangent line to a space curve. is any given point of a space curve, and $P(x_1 + Aa, y_1 + Ay, z_1 + As)$ is any second point of the curve, the equations of the secant P are $ZJ (io4)$ or where As is the length of the arc P. Denning the tangent at P as in I, 59, we have as its equations 106. Equations of a straight line in terms of its direction cosines and a known point upon it. Let $Pl(x_v y_v z_j)$ (fig. 65) be a known point of the line, and let l, m , and n be its direction cosines. Let $P(x, y, z)$ be any point of the line. On IP as a diagonal construct a parallelopiped as in 93. Then if we denote PIP by r , we have These are the parametric equations of the line, the variable parameter being r , r being positive if the point is in one direction from P_v and negative if it is in the other direction from P_i . By eliminating r we have (2) $l m n$ 65 which are but two independent linear equations. 107. Problems on the plane and the straight line. In this article we shall solve some problems illustrating the use of the equations of the plane and the straight line. 1. Plane determined by three known points. Let the three given Q....
