African problems are our problems and our problems are African problems -Malcolm X, at the OAU, July 1964 With eighteen African countries celebrating the 50th Anniversary of their political independence in 2010 alone, and another sixteen African countries joining them with 50th Anniversary celebrations between now and 2020, the political unification of the African Continent has become inevitable. As we move forward ever on this pan African journey we stand on the shoulders the 52 African nations that have waged successful struggles for political independence over the past 60 years and the most significant pan African visionary leaders of the 20th century. In this regard Marcus Garvey, Kwame Nkrumah and Malcolm X stand alone as giants. The Organization of African Unity (OAU), in the 20th century failed to achieve the noble goals of Garvey and Nkrumah for the political unification of Africa and the establishment of a united continental government. The OAU s replacement organization, the African Union, in the first decade of the 21st century, has done no better. Here lays the great challenge of African people, worldwide, in the first quarter of the first century of the new millennium. Africa is a vast and mighty continent that is rich in people and rich in resources. Its land mass is 11.7 million squares miles which is three and a half times that of the continental United States and large enough to hold to combined land masses of the United States, Europe, China, India and Argentina. It is the home of one billion African people coming from 800 ethnic groups and speaking 1,000 native languages. English is also widely spoken. The continent has inherited 54 political...
